HON. P. J. BOLAN IS DEAD.

Peter James Bolan looked for the last time on earth at his home in Los Angeles county, California, the 12th instant. He died suddenly from a stroke of appoplexy, and without a note of warning, passed from time to eternity. For many years there was no man more generally known in Graham county or southern Arizona, than the subject of this sketch. The writer first met him in Phenix, in the spring of 1878, and from that time until he left this county, knew him intimately in the social, professional and political walks of life. He was a native of the city of Dublin, a graduate of a college in Ireland, and an American by adoption. Coming to this country at an early age, he entered the Union army during the late war, and served with dis-

Accidentally passing through the Salt River valley, then undeveloped and almost an arid waste, he was impressed with the magnificent possibilities of that favored section, and resolved to make Phenix his home and engage in the practice of law. Elected to the legislative assembly from Maricopa in 1880, he became prominent as a legislator and an important factor in the creation of this county, which was at that time a part of Apache and Pima counties. Shortly after the adjournment of the legislature he moved to Safford, and was appointed District Attorney, to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Neri Osborn, who had been appointed as locus ten-

Mr. Bolan was a shrewd, sagacious and earnest politician. He delighted in politics, was an uncompromising Democrat, and for years never failed to attend county appearance at the GUARDIAN office and Territoaial conventions. In a speech at Safford, on the 25th of September, 1882, when accepting the chairmanship of the convention, he said: "We meet here as the first convention ever held in Graham county, and as such I hope, and confidentally believe, that we shall bear out what our name, Democratic, implies, especially the three great Jeffersonian principles, by nominating men of honesty, capacity and fidelity. In thus remembering, your action today cusures success."

This brief and imperfect sketch is from one who enjoyed and apprecipted the friendship of P. J Bolon. The rule teaches us to say paught but good of the dead. A better rule would teach us to speak nothing of the dead save that which

There was much in the character of Mr. Bolan to admire and emulate. Though leaving his native country and coming to America in early life, his love for the land of defeat of the Miles county bill at his nativity, for its customs and Phenix. Long before the span of life allotted to us by the Psalmist had been run, the summons came "to join the innumerable caravan which moves to the pale relms of shade" and he closed a useful and honorable career. He died with harness on; his mental faculties unimpaired his genial nature unchilled. No warning of the end was given, but like a bolt of lightning from a cloudless sky the instant summons came, calling him to appear before that higher cours, where no plea in abatement or dillatory plea whatsoever is heard; that court from which there is no appeal, whoso judgments are as unerring as the course of the planets, as impartial as

An iron-molder named Thomas Gorman recently walked into the U. S. District attorney's office at Seattle, Washington and asked to have a warrant issued for his arrest for counterfeiting and passing counterfeit coin.

Gorman said that he had confessed to the officers of the Salvation Army and made up his mind to do the same to the authorities. He said that he had passed $180 in coin during the past two months and that he made the coin himself using an electric plater to plate lead money.
